Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 18 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very wet over England and Wales from later Monday.

Today:
Showers continuing over much of Scotland - heavy and blustery in the far north. Drier to start further south but rain arriving into Wales and southwest England during the afternoon and then moving northeast.

Tonight:
Rain for most, heavy at times, most persistent across northern England and north Wales. Becoming windy in the south. Showers for north Scotland. Cold in north Scotland, mild further south.

Tuesday:
Rain continuing, heavy and persistent over central parts with some snow for Northern Ireland and southern Scotland. Windy and mild in south. Colder with sunny spells and showers to north.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Remaining extremely unsettled with heavy rainfall, and the potential for some snowfall and strong winds across southern and more especially central areas. Much colder in the north with wintry showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.